Welcome Message

It's a great pleasure to invite Natural Products Scientists (NPS) from all over the world to attend the PSE-NPS 2020 Summit on "Natural Products for Healthy Living" to be held in Khulna University, Khulna, Bangladesh, during 16-18 January 2020. The PSE-NPS 2020 Summit will be organized by the Pharmacy Discipline of Khulna University, in association with the Phytochemical Society of Europe (PSE). This program is co-badged with International Society for Ethnopharmacology (ISE) and Society for Ethnopharmacology, India (ISFE). We hope to bring together scientists to provide an excellent platform for discussion and dissemination of knowledge about recent advancement and future prospect of natural products.

Aims and Views

The conference will focus on "Natural products for healthy living" to explore the prospects and challenges associated with research in natural products and dietary nutraceuticals. The topic will include isolation, identification and assessment of bioactive plant secondary metabolites and various food supplements in the context of prevention and cure of diseases. It will also incorporate research activities relating to natural products formulation. Therefore, this conference will provide an excellent opportunity to meet experts around the globe to share ideas and explore possible collaborations with natural product scientists, nutritionists, medicinal chemists, formulation scientists and other related colleagues from both academia and industries.

Excellence of the Summit Venue

Khulna University bears a distinct significance due to its location in the divisional headquarter Khulna – the third largest metropolitan city of Bangladesh. This university is free from all political unrest until now. Khulna University is the first public university to have acted as a powerful performer in the economic and cultural life of the southwestern region of Bangladesh.
